LINER STOPPED SHORT

All Guns Turned on Liner and Many Killed on Deck and in Boats.

Naples, Nov. 11, via Paris, Nov. 12, 12:45 a. m. (Delayed in transmission.) -The owners of the Italian liner Ancona, sunk in the Mediterranean by a submarine, have received the report of the Ancona's captain in which he makes the positive charge that the submarine gave no warning to the liner or afforded those on board of her a chance to escape.

The first shot, the captain's report declares, was fired when the submarine was three miles distant. The captain immediately stopped the ship, says, but this did not appear to satisfy the commander of the submaine which continued to shell the liner. The captain without delay ordered everybody to take to the boats, upon which he declares, the submarine turned all her guns, killing and younding many persons both in the boats and on the deck of the steamer. Some of the passengers who were thrown into the water and sought to save themselves by clutching the side of the submarine, were pushed away with jeers and insults, he asserts,

Election of-ficials in San Francisco refused to permit Mrs. MacKenzie to register on the ground that she had become a British subject by reason of her marriage. She resorted to the state courts for writs to compel the officials to permit her to register, claiming that the act of congress did not apply to women remaining in this country and that if it did, it was unconstitutional. She was denied the writs and appealed to the supreme court. In the brief submitted to the court in her behalf, it is said that the decision is of vast importance to American women because of the European war, particularly in traveling on the
